What is converted housing mean for me?

Converted housing rooms are adapted for an additional roommate prior to move-in day.

- These rooms are able to accommodate the number of people assigned.
- All residents will receive the same amenities and furniture (see inside).
- Residents can rearrange furniture in a manner comfortable for all roommates, but they must keep all university-provided furnishings within the room.
- Typically, converted housing assignments are not based on timing of application but rather accommodating requested preferences (e.g., roommate request or building request).

Introduction to Converted Housing

What is converted housing? Converted housing is designated rooms, often larger than standard rooms, that are utilized for an additional resident. More than 300 residents are part of the converted housing program at the beginning of the academic year.

Converted housing residents often have questions, and we are here to help. If you have additional questions, we encourage you to call our offices at (773) 325-7196 to speak to a housing assignments coordinator.
The Benefits of Converted Housing:

- Converted housing allows more DePaul University first-year students the opportunity to take advantage of living in on-campus housing at the beginning of the academic year.
- All students who are assigned to converted housing are considered permanent residents of that room and are not required to move during the academic year. Should you request a move, that request will be processed ahead of regular room change requests as space permits. Room change requests can be made beginning September 26.
- Residents living in converted housing receive a 20 percent housing credit (see below for additional details).

Converted Housing Credit

Converted housing residents will be issued credits with the following standards:

- A 20 percent credit will be given to all converted housing residents for the time period when an additional resident is assigned to the room. Credits will be issued at the end of each quarter.

What will my room be like?

Converted housing rooms will be triple-occupancy rooms and have bunked or lofted beds. To help you prepare for packing for move-in day, see approximate floor plans below:
