

WRD 377: Writing and Social Engagement: Writing Across Borders

Spring Quarter, MW, 11:20am-12:50pm, LPC

Are you interested in working with multilingual writers?

Writing and Social Engagement: Writing Across Borders is a course designed for DePaul students to virtually collaborate with university students at Unichristus University in Fortaleza, Brazil.

This is a face to face course on LPC during the Spring Quarter 2019.

You'll also learn more about university and student life in Brazil while developing your intercultural discourse skills through collaborative projects.

The course fulfills the Experiential Learning requirement in the Liberal Studies Program.

For more information, you can contact the instructor Hannah Harris at hharris9@depaul.edu.

Topics discussed will include:

- Writing for culturally and linguistically diverse audiences
- The "native" bias in learning and teaching English
- The linguistic theory of "translanguaging"
- Best practices in writing feedback
